A DRASTIC LAW.

Not a single cigarette or a package of cigarette papers can be purchased today in all the State of Indiana. Any individual caught smoking a cigarette or with cigarette papers in his possession may be fined a large sum of money. This is the most drastic anti-cigarette law enacted by any State and it will be interesting to see if enforcement of its provisions is practicable. Many people will be inclined to think that the law in its entirety cannot be enforced.

While the sale of cigarettes may be stopped, indeed it seems to have been stopped already, it is very doubtful, according to good lawyers, if the section relating to the use of cigarettes and the possession of cigarette papers is valid. Several fines have been imposed under the section and one case is on its way to the State's highest court. Opinions as to the outcome differ.

It is pointed out that in localities where prohibition laws are in effect there is nothing to prevent the bringing in of intoxicants for personal use. Some authorities contend that there is even more drinking in prohibition communities than in communities that permit the sale of intoxicants. This, however, is beside the question. The truth is that whiskey is brought into prohibition sections and drunk openly, and no prosecutions result.

It is lawful to prevent a man from importing cigarettes into Indiana for his own use? Can a man be legislated out of a bad habit? It will be a very good thing indeed for Indiana if this section of the statute is held to be valid, for there is no question about the harm done by cigarettes. And the prohibition placed on sales will undoubtedly have the effect of reducing the use of cigarettes, regardless of the other section.

Mrs. Minnie Davis of Omaha is a great-grandmother at the age of 43. She was born in 1855, married in the early part of 1867 and became the mother of a daughter before the close of the year. This daughter was married at the age of 13 and became the mother of a girl baby the following year. This girl was married at the age of 15 and she became a mother at 16. The great grandmother says she does not believe in girls marrying too young.
